Embark on a transformative journey at the School of Veterinary Medicine, where every foundation leads to boundless opportunities, and every student's potential is nurtured for a future filled with endless possibilities.

We are proud to launch the School of Veterinary Medicine at IMU, inaugurated in 2025 as part of our commitment to advancing animal and public health through education, research, and service.

Our flagship programme — the Bachelor of Science in Bioveterinary Science — is designed for students passionate about animal health and wellbeing, and eager to make a meaningful difference in society. This degree provides a strong foundation in animal biology, disease mechanisms, diagnostics, and the broader connections between animals, humans, and the environment.

At IMU, we champion the One Health concept, recognising the vital links between animal, human, and environmental health. Our curriculum was developed in close collaboration with experts from academia and industry, both locally and internationally, ensuring its relevance to current and future needs.

With dedicated faculty, hands-on learning experiences, and a strong focus on ethical and professional development, our students will graduate as competent, compassionate, and resourceful individuals — well-prepared for diverse careers in animal health, biomedical science, research, and beyond.
